

Ryoichi KAWADA (senior member):

In 1991, graduated from the Graduate School of the University of Tokyo. In the same year, joined KDDI and started working at its R&D Laboratories. Engaged in research and development of video transmission, focusing particularly on TV standards conversion and image quality evaluation/monitoring. From 1997 to 1998, served as visiting researcher at Columbia University, United States. From 2014 to 2016, served as senior researcher (W3C fellow) at Keio University SFC . From 2016 to 2018, served as senior policy researcher, Cabinet Office. Currently engaged in research and development of cloud-based TV standards conversion and underwater acoustic positioning for combined aerial and underwater drones. A holder of a doctoral degree in engineering.